OUFSP Lecturers and tutors

Director and Tutor in Diplomatic Practice: Mrs Kate Jones

Kate Jones became Director of the Foreign Service Programme in 2015. She is a member of the Law Faculty of the University of Oxford and a Fellow of Kellogg College. A lawyer and a diplomat, her interests lie in diplomacy, public international law and human rights law. Kate read law at Somerville, then trained and qualified as a commercial litigation solicitor in the City of London. During this period she spent several months at the Court of Appeal, as judicial assistant to Lord Bingham (then Lord Chief Justice) and Baroness Butler-Sloss. She then returned to Oxford to take the BCL, focusing on public international law and human rights law, before joining the legal cadre of the UK Foreign and Commonwealth Office. As well as in London, she has served in Geneva as Legal Adviser to the UK Mission to the United Nations and in Strasbourg as UK Deputy Representative to the Council of Europe.

Public International Law Lecturer: Dr Catherine MacKenzie

Dr Catherine MacKenzie is a member of the Faculty of Law of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, a Research Fellow of Green Templeton College, Oxford and a Bye-Fellow of Homerton College, Cambridge. Her interests include Public International Law, International Environmental Law and the Law of Armed Conflict. A member of the English and Australian Bars, she has practised law with Allen & Overy, World Bank and Asian Development Bank in Washington DC, Hong Kong, Tokyo and Manila and has advised women’s law schools in the Middle East. She is co-editor of the book, Law, Tropical Forests and Carbon: the case of REDD+ (CUP, 2013) and her monograph, International Law and the Protection of Forests, will be published by OUP. Dr MacKenzie graduated from Oxford, the Inns of Court School of Law in London, Sydney University and the Australian National University, at which she was a Commonwealth Scholar.

International Trade & Finance Lecturer: Dr Adeel Malik

Dr Adeel Malik is a development macroeconomist with a strong multi-disciplinary orientation. His research engages with questions of long-run development, political economy and economic history, with a special focus on Muslim societies. Apart from engaging with cross-country empirics on development, he is trying to develop a broader research lens on the political economy of the Middle East. He also holds the Globe Fellowship in the Economics of Muslim Societies at the Oxford Centre for Islamic Studies, and is a Research Associate of the Centre for the Study of African Economies and the Oxford Centre for the Analysis of Resource-Rich Economies, both based at the Department of Economics. Before joining ODID, he completed his doctorate in economics at Oxford University as a Rhodes Scholar in 2004. Dr Malik’s research on the Middle East’s political economy has featured in CNN, Fortune Magazine, The Times London, Financial Times, and Gulf News. He strongly believes in the role of the public intellectual. In that spirit, he has engaged with a wider audience by occasionally contributing op-ed pieces to The New York Times, Project Syndicate, Al-Jazeera, Huffington Post, and Foreign Policy Magazine.

International Politics Lecturer: Dr Jean-François Drolet

Dr JF Drolet has been the international politics lecturer on the OUFSP programme since October 2006. He is also Senior Lecturer in Politics and International Relations at Queen Mary University, London, since September 2011. His main research interests are in International Political Theory, the History of Ideas, Social Philosophy, War, Political Violence and US Foreign Policy. He is the author of American Neoconservatism: The Politics and Culture of a Reactionary Idealism (Columbia University Press: 2011) and has published articles in several academic journals. He is presently completing a monograph on Friedrich Nietzsche and International Political Theory.